Some of them, after reviving their appointments, continued avowedly, and many more unavowedly, their connexion with the press, and theii-partisan services. When, t is considered how small a numerical proportion, editors, c. of newspapers, bear to the rest of the people of the United States, (scarcely a!0,000th part,) and how large a portion of this class of citizens (about me tenth,) General Jackson has appointed to office, no reasonable man an doubt that their appointments proceeded from some motive having eference to their profession. What this motive Whs, General Jackson s riends have told you in advance, in the debate on Mr. Saunders s Resoution. You are aware of the present state of a large portion of the ress, and of its connexion with the the Executive. You have read r3r. Hamilton s prophetic description, and the remarks of other political riends of the present Chief Magistrate. I leave it to yourselves ta nake the application. Of the extension of the Executive Patronage in relation to the Post Office Department, and of its consequences, I have already spoken, and will not renew the melancholy theme. The new and alarming character given to the patronage of the Government by the present reforming Administration, is sufficiently ipparentfrom what has been said concerning several departments of the he public service. Additional illustrations from every other branch if it, might readily be presented. The results of Executive patronage, is thus applied, convert into sad reality...
